Wherever we collect or use your data, TPQ makes sure that this is done for a valid legal reason. This will be for at least one of the following purposes:

- to arrange or manage TPQ's products or to provide services,
- to meet responsibilities we have to tax officials, law enforcement or otherwise meet our legal responsibilities,
- to operate and improve our products and services and keep people informed about our products and services or for any other purposes we identify as relevant to further our business interests but never at the expense of your privacy rights (we refer to these activities as our "legitimate interests"),
- where we have obtained appropriate consents to collect or use your personal information for a particular purpose.

Your data rights and how to exercise them

In this context, TPQ may ask you for proof of identity when making a request to exercise any of these rights. We do this to ensure we only disclose information where we know we are dealing with the right individual. We will not ask for a fee, unless we think your request is unfounded, repetitive or excessive. Where a fee is necessary, we will inform you before proceeding with your request. TPQ aims to respond to all valid requests within one month. It may however take us longer if the request is particularly complicated or you have made several requests. We will always let you know if we think a response will take longer than one month. To speed up our response, TPQ may ask you to provide more detail about what you want to receive or are concerned about. Finally please consider that TPQ may not always be able to do what you have asked, for example, if it would impact the duty of confidentiality we owe to others, or if we are otherwise legally entitled to deal with the request in a different way. An individual's rights under the GDPR legislation are neatly set-out in the German GDPR implementation Act. This section explains explanatory how these rights apply in the context of TPQ.
